My grandma was the first person to arrive in Hope Town. She arrived in 1960, from Haiti. It was a hard decision to make. She didn't want to leave her family behind, but the life she was living was awful.

Slowly the tears started to roll down her face as she stepped onto the rocking boat. She waved good-bye as her family slowly disappeared.

It was a rough ride but she made it safe and sound. They landed on an island which was unfamiliar. Everybody was wondering where they were. Then she said to the captain, "Where are we?" The captain looked back to see who asked the question.

The captain said in a strong voice, "You are in Hope Town my dear, and this is where you will stay." Then the captain ordered everyone off his ship. With a loud boom everyone ran off the ship into the bushes. She started walking until she got really tired and hungry. She found some berries which were really red and huge. First she thought about if they were poisonous or good berries. She gobbled down the whole thing without any worries.

Then suddenly she heard a car sound and couple more car sounds. She followed the sound until she found a road. She started walking along the side way walk looking at everything around. She didn't realize that a man was coming her way. Bam! they bumped each other. The man said in a calm voice, "Watch out!"

The man said, "You look like your new here." She respond in a scared voice, "yes I am new." The man asked, "do you want lunch?" She nodded her head. They walked down the road until they saw a sign that said Harbours Edge. They walked in and sat down. A lady walked over and said, "can I help you?"

Yes, I would like a bowl of peas and rices please. The woman said it would be done in two minutes. The man said in a soft voice, "Are you single and what is your name?" My grandma replied, "yes I am single and my name is Mary Jean. What about you?" My name is Anitono and I am single to at the man said with a smile, "Where will you be staying today?" I have no where to stay." The man said she could stay with him. She thanked him with a wide smile.
